Fire burns 3,500 acres

Debris and ash filled the air above and surrounding the fire on Tuesday as a fire on West Mountain spread out of control and threatened the newly constructed BYU Observatory.

Artha Burbidge, a spokeswoman for the Utah Interagency Fire Center in Salt Lake City, said the fire started early Tuesday morning on property owned by Ronald Ludlow of Spanish Fork at the base of the west side of West Mountain. It took firefighters six hours to bring it under control, but strong winds carried it back into dry brush. The fire out of control again and up the mountain.

Observatory endangered
The new observatory of BYU's Department of Astronomy and Physics is located directly atop the mountain from where the fire started. Dr. D. Harold McNamara, in charge of observatory operations, was inside the building at the time of the fire.

He said he saw the fire start up the mountain and could see it was out of control and was going to work its way up to the top. He said he left the observatory and came down the mountain to try to get the firefighters to go in front of the line of the fire. But by the time he got down, it had spread too far to contain, he said.

At one point there was a report that several construction workers at the observatory were trapped at the fire. The fire circled the area, and escaped down the east face of the mountain and a few remained in the microwave tower owned by Mountain Bell several hundred yards from the observatory. All escaped unharmed.

When the smoke cleared and the fire had consumed the brush surrounding the observatory and moved on, it was determined the building had not sustained any damage, according to McNamara. "I think it's just amazing that we didn't have any damage to the observatory. It's incredible," he said. The fire burned all around the building but there is not a mark on it, and no trace of smoke or anything, he added.

Damage

Carol Dunlap, public relations supervisor for Mountain Bell, said there was minor damage to the base of the microwave structure but it did not disrupt operations.

Roger Forsey, Payson fire chief, was manning the water truck early in the afternoon as he and other firefighters refilled the small water tanks of the vehicles used by firefighters to transport water to the scene.

Ludlow said the area at the base of the mountain which he owned was used for grazing cattle and that it was tough to watch it go up in smoke.

"I've worked this land for all of my 47 years and so did my father and his father before him," said Ludlow.

Mrs. Burbidge said late Wednesday afternoon the fire had consumed more than 3,500 acres of land and that approximately 160 firefighters from the Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management and the Utah Department of Lands, Forestry Division had been assigned to the fire. In addition to those agencies, firefighters from Spanish Fork, Payson and Santaquin had also been involved.

Both fires are expected to be contained today, a fire fighting official said. The fires were man-caused and an investigation is being conducted to find the source of the fires.

Air tankers

She said several air tankers and helicopters had been used Tuesday and Wednesday.

The tankers can carry 2,000 gallons of water per drop and the helicopters are used to guide tankers to the drop site, gaining a total overview of the fire lines and providing the fire boss with up-to-the minute reports.

Mrs. Burbidge said Floyd Bartlett is fire boss for the West Mountain blaze, and while the blaze is still under investigation, it appeared to be man-made.

Utah County Sheriff Mack Holley said one of his deputies has been assigned to work with Forest Service investigators in determining the cause of the fire. So far four persons have been questioned by the investigation team, but no arrests have been made.

A Utah Interagency Fire Center spokeswoman, Vera Crandall, said Bartlett estimated the fire will be contained by 10 a.m. and under control by approximately 3 p.m. today.

Judge says controllers in contempt of court

By STEVE THOMSEN
Staff Writer

Most Salt Lake City air traffic controllers refused to return to their jobs Wednesday despite President Reagan's threat to fire them and a local federal judge's ruling that they were in contempt of court, according to Ken Bell, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization Local 543.

"It's up to the president," Bell said. "If he wants to fire us then we will take our chances. We're ready to go out and look for new jobs." U.S. District Judge Aldon Anderson found PATCO Local 504 and two of its officers in contempt of court for not returning to work as ordered.

He said beginning Friday the union would be fined $10,000 a day and its president, Doug Ramsay, and vice president, Steve Helton, would be fined $1,000 if they did not return to work.

Return to work

William O'Neill, facility chief at Salt Lake City's Air Route Traffic Control Center, said 21 striking controllers returned to work Wednesday afternoon, beating Reagan's deadline.

He said 126 of 222 controllers at the center missed the deadline. About 20 percent of the controllers had never joined the strike.

Paul Kari, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration regional offices in Denver, said Reagan will notify striking controllers by telegram today that "they will have the option to return to work on a non-duty basis or consider themselves officially terminated."

"Yes, he really is going to fire them," Kari said. "The president said he is not going to play games. We are going to operate the system with or without them."

Kari added "thousands of people" have called the FAA and volunteered to work in place of the controllers who have walked out. "All of these people are certified controllers who need the work."

The FAA anticipates a smooth transition in replacing union controllers, Kari said. "Things will be getting better, not worse. The airlines are cooperating with us all the way."

Reagan firm

Bell said Reagan has stood firm against PATCO "because he is trying to show other federal unions that they won't get away with striking in the future. We didn't expect him to come down this hard and this fast."

According to Bell it would take one to three years to train the new air traffic controllers required to replace those fired by the president. "The magnitude of the problem will be so great that it will take a couple of years to get things back to normal."

A spokesman at the PATCO Local 543 office said most striking controllers are still confident they won't lose their jobs. "We haven't done a lot of checking around for new jobs because we haven't felt a need to do so," he said.

Wives picket

Wives of the striking air controllers picketed the Salt Lake City airport Wednesday, Bell said. "We checked with our attorney and he said there was nothing that could have been legally done to prevent them. They can stop us but not our wives."

Kari Mitchell, public relations officer for Western Airlines, said she was confident the controllers who have chosen to remain on strike will be fired by Reagan. "They are going to have a rude awakening," she said.

Mrs. Mitchell said most major airlines in the Salt Lake City Airport continue to have "a lot of no-shows, but Western only had to cancel two flights Wednesday."

"Things are running relatively smooth despite the strike. Our pilots are very pleased with the performance of the people who are working in the control tower right now," she said.

Santaquin fire still burning

Fire continues to rage in Santaquin Canyon, but is expected to be brought under control by 10 this morning as more than 150 firefighters from four agencies battle the blaze.

The fire, which started Tuesday at approximately 6:30 p.m., quickly spread out of control and firefighters from Santaquin were backed up with reinforcements from the Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, the Utah Department of Lands and surrounding communities.

While fighting the Santaquin blaze, three volunteer firemen from the Salem Fire Department responding to another alarm 10 miles away were involved in an accident shortly after 10 p.m.

Salem Fire Chief Erman Stone said, "They were on highway 91 in Spring Lake when it appears that the transmission in their old military three-quarter ton brush truck locked up on them, causing the vehicle to skid and swerve on the road and then roll over three times."

He said all three men were thrown from the vehicle.

Albion Neil Sandeson was run over by the truck and is presently listed in serious condition with multiple injuries at Utah Valley Hospital.

Monte James was hit with the water tank which was on the truck and is listed in critical but stable condition in the intensive care unit of Mountain View Hospital in Payson.

Gary Warner received minor injuries and was treated and released from Mountain View Hospital.

Vera Crandall, a spokeswoman for the Utah Interagency Fire Center in Salt Lake City, said a team of men from the Utah State Prison also worked to fight the blaze.

Controllers fired

Reagan takes stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration began firing striking air traffic controllers Wednesday and declared itself determined to run the flightpaths without them even though the flying public will have "no cakewalk" for the next year or two.

Neither the government nor the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization budged from their hard-line stands in the wake of Monday's walkout by some 13,000 union controllers.

"I'm sorry, and I'm sorry for them," Reagan said of the firing late in the day. "I certainly take no joy out of this. . . I was hoping more of them would recognize the obligation they have. Our position has to be irreversible."

The union, apparently with few defections, continued striking despite the jailing of several local officials and the passage of President Reagan's 11 a.m. deadline Wednesday for a return to work.

The administration then unleashed notices of dismissal and vowed no second chances.

The union's president, Robert E. Poli, said an afternoon survey by his organization showed that less than 30 percent of the membership was working despite the administration's action, which he termed "the most blatant form of union-busting I have ever seen." He vowed: "It will not be our last strike."

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said the air traffic control system can operate "relatively well" for the year or two it would take to bring the workforce back to normal with new trainees. But "there is no question we are in trouble. . . this is no cakewalk," he said.

Lewis said he knew of 470 controllers who returned to work during the day and, while conceding he had no firm figures, estimated that 38 to 40 percent of the entire workforce was on the job. But that figure apparently included supervisory and other non-union personnel who did not strike in the first place.

The Federal Aviation Administration, meanwhile, said that up to 72 percent of the regularly scheduled flights were taking to the air Wednesday. But the agency still was limiting takeoffs from the 23 largest airports to half the normal number.

Many of the planes were only partially occupied as would-be passengers chose to avoid the delays. Airlines say the strike is costing them tens of millions of dollars a day.

Poli maintained that no more than half of the regular air traffic was moving.

Meanwhile, federal judges jailed five union officials for alleged violations of court orders against the strike.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan remained "solid as a rock" in his decision to fire the defiant controllers. Reagan himself, at a picture session with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, asked, "If we feel that our oath of office need not be kept, how long would we have this society?"

Reagan has taken the position that the controllers, in effect, quit their jobs when they decided to carry out an illegal strike.

Sadat tells Reagan work with PLO

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt told President Reagan on Wednesday it was for the United States to work with the Palestine Liberation Organization on a Middle East agreement.

"I told President Reagan the morning today," Sadat's reporters following the first ever between the two Sadat declined to say what his reaction was. Reagan has said he considers the PLO a terrorist organization.

Sadat said the United States should try to negotiate with the PLO, recognizing Israel and abiding by the United Nations Security Council resolutions that call for secure borders.

A commitment was made in a protocol signed in 1975 by

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as part of the agreement for the phased withdrawal of Israeli troops from the Egyptian Sinai.

Sadat said the United States should try to expand the July 24 cease-fire in Lebanon between Israel and the PLO into a broader peace accord for the Middle East.

A senior Reagan administration official who asked not to be identified, said Reagan did not have an opportunity to respond directly to the PLO issue. "They talked just around that point, and it's going to come up again," the official said.

Sadat also suggested a summit meeting between Egypt, Israel and the United States "at some future date" on the prospects for peace, the official said.

Commencement speaker to be U of U president

University of Utah President Dr. David P. Gardner will be the recipient of an honorary doctoral degree and the featured speaker at BYU's summer commencement exercises Aug. 21, according to a spokesman for Public Communications.

DAVID P. GARDNER

Paul Richards, director of Public Communications, also said Elder Boyd K. Packer of the LDS Council of the Twelve and a member of the BYU Board of Trustees will conduct the ceremony.

According to Richards, Gardner is receiving the degree because of his accomplishments in the field of education and because of his work in California where he served as director of the California Alumni Association at Berkeley. Gardner was also the field and scholarship director for the UC Alumni Association at Berkeley.

Richards said Gardner received the BYU Distinguished Alumnus Service Award in 1975, was named as a "bridge" where he was a visiting fellow in 1979 and was selected as one of "100 young leaders of the academy" in a nationwide survey conducted by "Change" magazine in 1978.

The public is invited to attend the 9:30 a.m. ceremonies in the Marriott Center. The traditional procession from the Smoot Administration Building will begin at 9 a.m.

F16A fighter jet crashes west of Great Salt Lake

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (AP) — An Air Force F16 fighter jet crashed Wednesday on the Utah Test and Training Range west of the Great Salt Lake, killing the pilot, Hill Air Force Base spokesman said.

Killed was Capt. J.E. Moats, 29, of Ogden, assigned to the 4th Tactical Fighter Squadron of the 388th Tactical Fighter Wing based at Hill, said Lt. Donna Edwards, assistant public information officer for the 388th.

She said the single-seat fighter plane crashed at 2:54 p.m. about 16 miles southwest of the west shore terminus of the lake's railroad causeway.

Hill spokesman Tom Bruffy said the plane burned upon impact and the pilot was found dead at the scene.

Spokeswoman Connie Smith said that at the time of the crash, the plane was on a routine training mission, apparently making a strafing run at a target on the Eagle Range.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known, she said. She said an Air Force board of inquiry would be convened to investigate the crash.

Medflies found in Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Bob Graham on Wednesday promised swift action — including possible aerial spraying — to protect Florida's $4 billion produce industry if three Mediterranean fruit flies trapped near Tampa are found to be fertile.

The flies, two males and one female found Tuesday by a U.S. Department of Agriculture inspector, were being hand-carried Wednesday on a plane to Los Gatos, Calif.

Experts there were to determine — probably by this morning — whether the dead flies were fertile, said Betsy Adams of the USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in Washington.

Agricultural officials and citrus growers charged the flies could be from California and their presence here might signal the start of an infestation like the one in three California counties.

But it was not known where the flies came from, federal officials said. And it was possible they were placed in the trap as a hoax, Ms. Adams said.

However, Frank Graham, a lawyer for the state Agriculture Department, said it was "obvious" the medflies came from California because 29 shipments of its produce have entered Tampa during the past month.

"We've been saying it's going to happen and now it has," Graham said.

If the flies prove to be fertile, the governor said he would call for aerial spraying of malathion. Such spraying can be ordered only by the state agriculture commissioner.

The pesticide is in use now in California, where produce from three counties is under federal quarantine. Malathion also has been used against several Florida medfly infestations, most recently in 1963. It also is used in Florida to combat mosquitoes.

"If we can move quickly to limit the scope and eradicate, then I think the damage will be confined," Graham said. Noting that the flies were found on "the edge of our main citrus-producing area," Graham said, "This is what our concern has been since we knew about the infestation in California ... that it would leak out of that state and begin to affect our citrus industry."

Ms. Adams said if the flies prove to be sterile, then they might have entered Florida with fruit from California, Mexico or Guatemala. She also suggested, without elaboration, that "they may have been planted" in the trap.

Top Iranian theoretician assassinated in Tehran

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Assassins in a speeding car shot and killed the top theoretician of Iran's ruling party Wednesday and firing squads executed 10 more people, including a Harvard-educated cancer specialist.

In Cairo, the late shah's elder son announced plans to overthrow the revolutionary regime.

Paris, French President Francois Mitterrand recalled his ambassador to Iran for consultations and urged all French citizens to leave Iran because of possible danger.

After France gave asylum to ousted Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr last week, angry crowds demonstrated outside the French Embassy in Tehran. Iran demanded Bani-Sadr's extradition and Tehran radio, monitored in London, said the ambassador had been asked to leave because France had not approved the extradition.

Meanwhile, Iran's Parliament, by a vote of 130-14, endorsed Hossein Mohammad Javah Bahonar, head of the ruling Islamic Republican Party, as prime minister. Tehran Radio said. He replaced Mohammad Rezaei, the newly elected president.

Iran's official media said the IRP's top theoretician, Hassan Ayat, was shot and killed by three black-clad "counter-revolutionary" assassins as he prepared to drive from his home in a Tehran suburb to the parliamentary session that endorsed Bahonar.

Ayat's death was a severe blow for the party, whose founder, Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, and 71 other members were killed in a bomb blast June 28. Iranian officials blamed Ayat's killing on the Mujahideen Khalq, the leftist guerrillas who are battling Iran's fundamentalist Moslem clergy.

The official Pars news agency said nine leftists were executed by firing squad on charges of armed insurrection. Among them was Abbas Saberi, described as a founder of a Maoist party aligned with the Mujahideen Khalq.

This brought to 38 the number of leftists executed in three days and to more than 290 the number of assassinations since Bani-Sadr was ousted June 22.

Sources in Tehran said Dr. Ahmad Moghadam, a Harvard-educated cancer specialist, was executed Tuesday night on undisclosed charges. His execution, the sources said, was not officially made public.

Tehran radio said retired Lt. Gen. Hoseyn Rastegar Namdar was executed after being convicted of, among other things, waging war against God, taking part in "the pro-American military system" and suppressing Moslems in 1963.

Self-proclaimed Shah Reza II charged in a statement issued from exile in Cairo that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's 2 and one-half-year-old regime was one of "terror and tyranny, death and destruction."

Du Pont celebrates merger

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a champagne celebration at Du Pont Co. headquarters early Wednesday after the chemical company clinched the biggest corporate bidding war ever, but its takeover of Conoco Inc. brought concerns as well.

Du Pont said about 55 percent of Conoco's shares had been offered to it by the Tuesday midnight deadline, more than enough to take control of the nation's ninth-largest oil company and complete the biggest merger ever.

But while Du Pont will control Conoco — and Conoco's large reserves of coal, oil and natural gas — the nation's biggest chemical company must face billions of dollars of debt and a minority owner, Seagram Co. Ltd., that may wind up with a larger share of Du Pont than the Du Pont family controls.

Du Pont, based in Wilmington, Del., prevailed because Conoco shareholders feared a higher bid from Mobil Corp. might be blocked by antitrust problems. Mobil failed in frantic efforts to get the courts or the Securities and Exchange Commission to delay the Du Pont bid.

Du Pont will pay $7.4 billion in cash and stock for Conoco, more than twice the $3.6 billion Shell Oil Co. paid two years ago for Beldridge Oil Co., in what had been the largest corporate takeover.

Du Pont shed little light on its plans. "We see strong potential in the application of our research and engineering capabilities to meet challenges in the energy field," said chairman Edward Jefferson.

The two companies had annual sales of more than $31 billion and profits of $1.7 billion in 1980, enough to be the No. 7 company on the Fortune 500 list of industrial corporations. Conoco ranked No. 14 and Du Pont No. 15.

Seagram, a Canadian liquor distiller, said it would continue to buy all Conoco shares offered at a price of $92 through midnight Wednesday, and it seemed likely to pick up a large part of the shares not tendered to Du Pont.

Du Pont's own offer of $98 a share for 45 percent of Conoco was almost completely taken, meaning that those who tender to Du Pont now will get 1.7 Du Pont shares — worth about $77 — for each Conoco share.

If Seagram were to amass 45 percent of Conoco — all the shares not tendered to Du Pont by Tuesday midnight — and then tender them to Du Pont, it would wind up with about 68 million Du Pont shares, or 28 percent of Du Pont.

What Seagram would do with those shares is unclear, and the company refused to comment Wednesday. There has been speculation that Seagram might try to trade its shares for some Du Pont asset, possibly Consolidation Coal Co., a Conoco subsidiary that is the second-largest coal producer in the United States.

Begin survives close vote

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who made broad concessions to three religious parties to lure them into his coalition, won a paper-thin parliamentary vote of confidence for his hawkish new government Wednesday.

The 61-58 vote foretold unstable political times for Israel as Begin, 67, entered his second term as prime minister. Because the margin was so slim, the deputies' upraised hands had to be counted twice.

Begin quelled a minor rebellion in the ranks against his controversial choice for defense minister, retired Maj. Gen. Ariel Sharon. He also smoothed over a rift in his own Likud bloc by bringing its No. 2, Itzhak Mordechai, into the government as deputy premier and housing minister.

After an all-day debate in the 120-seat Knesset, and with only one member absent, Begin won the vote of confidence and was sworn in by speaker Menachem Savidor.

Begin made dozens of concessions to the religious parties, ranging from a promised ban on airline flights on Jewish holy days to cheap housing for religious couples and grants for religious seminaries.

The new government includes ministers from his Likud bloc, which has 48 parliament seats, the National Religious Party (6), Agudat Israel (4) and TAMI (3).

Begin's previous government also began with 61, but had more support from independents. Also, the Labor Party opposition then had only 32 seats, compared with 48 now.

Commercial rocket explodes in trial run

MATAGORDA ISLAND, Texas (AP) — A test rocket exploded on its ranch-based launch pad Wednesday, and a group of Texas entrepreneurs were set back several months in their effort to become the first private firm to send satellites into orbit for profit.

No one was injured in the blast, Space Services Inc. spokesman Walt Pennino said. A small range fire caused by the explosion was put out by cowboys and launch crew members.

He said everyone on the island stood more than a half-mile away from the launch pad behind an eight-foot wall of sandbags when engineers tried to fire the engine up for a five-second test. The 53-foot Percheron rocket was bolted to the launch pad to keep it from taking off during the test.

"We said all along we only had a 50-50 chance of success," said Pennino. "The rocket has exploded into at least four major parts."

He said when the engine blew it ignited a range fire on the property, which is part of a cattle ranch owned by Dallas developer Todd Wynne, one of the Space Services financial backers.

"Some of Todd Wynne's cowboys and the people in the rocket crew helped fight the brush fire, and the last I heard they had it under control," Pennino said.

Pennino said the accident would cost the company more than $1.2 million and set the firm's plans back at least six months.

Microfilm in need of cabinets

By PARKE STENZEL
Staff Writer

A million dollars worth of microfilm has been donated to the Harold B. Lee Genealogy Library for genealogical research.

The library, however, does not have the required cabinets to store the film, according to Roger Flick, genealogical librarian. He said the microfilm remains in the cartons it was shipped in and is gradually deteriorating.

"Dust is collecting on the boxes which will eventually contribute to the decreased life expectancy of the microfilm," Flick said, adding that the department cannot afford to buy the cabinets necessary to store the film. "Each cabinet costs $615 and we need 200 of them."

Flick said the donation consists of more than 140,000 rolls of microfilm by the Genealogical Society of Utah.

When asked about possible funding for the cabinets, Flick said, "After working one and one-half years we have been able to purchase four out of the 200 cabinets we need."

Flick said the department hoped to receive some funding through this year's class gift.

Doug Bush, financial vice president for ASBYU, said the choices considered for the 1981-82 gift were carried over from last year because the 1980-81 gift fell through at the last minute.

Susan Hollingsworth, public relations director for ASBYU, said the bylaws stipulate if a class gift is not utilized, the other ideas proposed for that gift must be exhausted before any new ideas can be considered.

ASBYU adviser Tamara Quick said those choices included chapels in South America, a slide and tape for the library, a non-academic scholarship and lighting the Y.

Bush said the first three considerations proved to be unfeasible. "So the committee chose to light the Y," he said the Y project would cost more than the $12,000 gift allotment.

Following a request by the class gift committee, the administration last year approved ad-

Stacked boxes of microfilm clutter the Harold B. Lee Genealogy Library. No other storage facility is available because of lack of funds for cabinets. According to librarians, the 140,000 rolls of microfilm will deteriorate if left in the boxes.

ditorial funds close to $18,000 to cover this project if it were chosen, Bush said. A less expensive method, however, was later discovered for lighting the Y.

Because the library had requested a donation for cabinets, ASBYU "submitted a proposal to the administration for Y lighting costing approximately $11,000 and approximately $10,000 to the genealogy library," Bush said.

When the administration reviewed the proposal, it approved the first part but rejected the second part.

"The administration said they didn't want to start a precedent in having more than one gift per year," Bush said.

Flick said the Development Office has been approached to assist, but because of its heavy commitment to raising funds for the football stadium, it has not been able to raise funds for the cabinets.

"There isn't another academic library in the United States that can come close to what we have here in the way of manuscript records on microfilm for family and local history research," Flick said. "We even have some things here that are not available in the society's main library in Salt Lake City."

Thomas Rogers

Literature can instruct, inspire

By KATHLEEN MULVEY
Staff Writer

Even the elect of God as recorded in scripture are not described in the most favorable detail, but that does not cause them to inspire us any less, said Dr. Thomas F. Rogers, chairman of the department of Asian and Slavic languages, in the BYU Forum assembly Tuesday.

"In fact, these characters are all the more credible because they are still so human," he said. "They are people with whom we can more readily identify. And it's important that we do so because, as with Nephi, we are meant to liken the scriptures unto ourselves."

In his address titled "The Sacred in Literature," Rogers discussed the redeeming value of literature dealing with sin and evil.

Quoting W. K. Wimsatt, one of the century's most respected critics, Rogers said, "Of course we don't call evil itself, or division or conflict desirable things. We only call facing up to them ... a desirable and mature state of soul and the right model and course of a mature poetic art."

Rogers said he would recommend great novels that deal with adultery such as "Madame Bovary," "Anna Karenina" and "Sister Carrie," because, apart from their artistic excellence, they powerfully dissuade.

"They warn us again of the consequences of certain choices, which, if we are still young and innocent, we might not fully anticipate. And vicariously they help us understand how it feels to suffer those consequences without having to do so," Rogers said.

Rogers suggested a plain and simple criterion for positively using this material. "Does a work glamorize or justify what it describes? Does it imply that evil is illusion and that sin was ever happiness?"

"If so, then it is not prescriptive and it is not enticing you. It definitely has a purpose, but that purpose is something else," he said, adding that benefits can come from dwelling on failure or depraved life-styles.

"First of all, these works are cautionary and instructive; they warn us what to avoid," he said. "Second, such literature consoles us and helps us better accept our own adversity."

Rogers said the third reason the material is beneficial is because it helps people better understand and empathize with those less fortunate.

UNION INSURANCE PLANS ACCEPTED

Although BYU, the church and the performers themselves are rewarded from international performing tours, Hillam said some of the business and government organizations that host such BYU tour groups may have ulterior motives for doing so.

Miss Briggs concluded, "I know the church was really put up front and given a good name by our performances."

Miss Briggs described the tour as "good publicity for the church."

Both Paxman and Miss Briggs said they considered the trip a politically, culturally and spiritually educational experience.

"The purpose of our tour was to perform and to give our students a learning experience," said Delynn Peay, assistant director of the International Folk Dancers.

Mrs. Peay said the Folk Dancers' audiences "really opened their hearts to us." She said the Folk Dancers try to get audiences to accept them "not as a professional dance company, but as ambassadors of friendship."

Hillam said the dancers and band performed before a wide range of audiences, including live television audiences in the Philippines, high school teenagers in Seoul, governors and mayors of Luzon, Philippines, shoppers in Shinjuku, and commuters at the Kinshi-Cho rail station in Tokyo along with more than 20,000 Japanese vacationers attending the Port Island Exposition in Kobe, Japan.

Folk Dancers reach Asians, cultural barriers crossed

By RALPH STEPHENSON
Staff Writer

BYU's Folk Dancers recently returned from (orthodox) Asia where they performed live and on television before millions of Filipinos, Koreans and Japanese.

The tour generated good publicity for the LDS church and BYU, according to the cultural adviser to the group. As must be expected, however, not all aspects of the tour were ideal, said Ray Hillam, coordinator of the International Relations Program.

"It was hot and it was humid, and sometimes it was real strenuous," said Michelle Briggs, a former student majoring in music pedagogy from Provo, and one of the performers on the trip. She did many of the dances performed with minor injuries.

Miss Briggs said, "The purpose for which (the Folk Dancers) went was accomplished completely, as far as the church, school and education go."

Folk Dancer Merrill Paxman, a junior majoring in media sales from Provo, said, "The Oriental people gave us an open-arms reception. The thing of love and friendship that we were able to share with the people was different than that of typical tourist groups."

He said these feelings of love and friendship are present when the dancers interacted with the people. "These emotions were able to cross language and cultural barriers."

Palmer 'duly sworn,' says Fitt

Utah County Attorney Jay Fitt signed a stipulation in a criminal court proceeding Wednesday that states Raedon Palmer to be a duly sworn and appointed justice of the peace, according to attorneys Berk ashburn.

The document also states Don Forsyth is named as the only duly elected Utah County justice of the peace.

"This is the first time Utah County Attorney has agreed in writing that Palmer is a duly sworn justice of the peace officer in a county," Washburn said.

According to Washburn, Palmer was to appear at a criminal trial Tuesday in Provo on one count of impersonating a peace officer and one count of unlawful misconduct.

"As far as we know, the peace officer charge will probably be dropped, and the misconduct charge will be subject to the outcome of our plea in 4th District Court," Washburn said.

He added that Palmer filed suit in 4th District Court last week to change the Utah County ordinance which organized and gave authority to the Utah County Constable Office.

Washburn said Palmer will continue with his duties as a Santaquin City Constable until the courts rule on the legality of the Utah County ordinance.

Provo to wage campaign for resident motivation

Provo residents will be hearing more of "Provo's got it: Get it!" in the future, according to Nevin Limburg, executive vice president of the Provo Chamber of Commerce.

Limburg said the Provo Chamber of Commerce and the Provo City Commission will be co-sponsoring a $23,750 promotional campaign designed to "instill pride in our community and stimulate local business."

"I don't know if any other city in Utah has done anything like this. This could put Provo on the map," he said. "We would really like to create some excitement."

Limburg said Provo City will use posters, bumper stickers, decals, T-shirts, and musical reproductions in a "campaign designed to create real emotional appeal."

Limburg said the city will use $10,100 for radio announcements and $3,000 for newspaper advertisements. "We are going to start our full-media campaign Sept. 5 built in the downtown area as a part of a city renovation project.

"We will use the ground-breaking as a kick-off event for the city campaign," he said.

BCI players show their stuff

Scott Mabey, a senior from Viewmont High School in Bountiful, shows off one of his moves in an attempt to make the slam-dunk finals held this week in conjunction with the BCI championships. The slam-dunk finals are scheduled for Friday in the Marriott Center.

By CARRIE LUNT
Staff Writer

A slam-dunk preliminary competition brought cheers and jeers from a Marriott Center crowd Tuesday night as some of the top high school basketball players in the country attempted to make the finals with their fancy moves.

Twelve of the best dunkers will be featured in the final competition to be held Friday at 8:30 p.m. in conjunction with the Eighth Annual Basketball Congress International Summer Prep Championships hosted this week by BYU.

The competitors were given a chance to warm up and a warning that hanging on the rim would not be allowed before the contest began. Each contestant had the entire court to himself with three attempts to show his stuff to the beat of disco music.

Successful and unusual dunks were met by enthusiastic shouts while those that were missed brought laughter from spectators.

The top scorer, 6-foot Jeep Jackson from the Carson, Calif., team, dazzled the judges with his high jumping ability.

A crowd favorite, Sherlock Holmes of the Rocky Mountain Stars, displayed thrilling dunks in the warm-up, but was unable to solve the mystery and connect on any of his three judged attempts. To chants of, "More, more," Holmes was allowed two extra unofficial chances to make it, but remained stumped.

Contestants displayed an amazing variety of dunks, including spins, reverse approaches and bounces off the backboard.

When one unenthusiastic observer was asked by his coach why he did not participate in the competition, he replied, "Not me man, that stuff's for showoffs." The coach responded, "So you save your showing off for the game, huh?"

Richard Chang, a 6-6 member of the South Coast team and a high school senior, impressed the crowd with his muscular and powerful dunks.

The finalists for Friday's competition are Ernest Myers, Riverside; Todd May, Louisville; Nolan Richardson, Oklahoma; LeRoy Smith and James Huff, Los Angeles Junior Lakers; Jay Bilas and Richard Chang, South Coast; Richard Relford and Walter Berry, New York Riverside Church; and Jeep Jackson, Carson.

Double-elimination tournament play will continue today through Saturday with games beginning each day at 10 a.m. The championship game will be played Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Half-price tickets are available for BYU students at the Marriott Center Ticket Office.

ASBYU Office defends ticket policy

By RALPH STEPHENSON
Staff Writer

The ASBYU Athletics Office vice president defended the fall semester football ticket policy by justifying many of the various ticket allotments as necessary rewards for student volunteers.

Jeff Andrus, Athletics Office vice president, said many preferred football tickets are allocated to individuals directly involved in football games. These tickets, awarded as incentives and rewards for student volunteers, are also provided for halftime performers, ushers and other workers.

"These people (student volunteers) probably put out a lot more time, more spirit, and sacrifice than the average BYU student," Andrus said. "They put in 10 to 20 hours a week and they don't get any benefits other than tickets."

A total of 12,000 football tickets are reserved for all BYU students, he said.

Wayne Passey,

current acting Athletics Office vice president, said of the approximate 1,300 complimentary and preferred tickets allotted to ASBYU and other campus organizations, most tickets are not bought with ASBYU funds.

In a memo on ASBYU ticket policy, Doug Bush, Finance Office vice president, wrote that "out of the 1,300 plus tickets, ASBYU (student government) gets less than 300. The majority of the 1,300 plus tickets go to places like BYU Cougar Band, Intercollegiate Athletics, Color Guard, etc."

"These are not ASBYU offices and organizations, if you are like the normal student and take ASBYU to mean student government," he wrote. "It becomes a rather damaging statement for student government if the student body thinks we are receiving over 1,300 tickets for our use."

Cougar band

Andrus said the BYU Cougar Band, which is allotted 240 tickets, pays for its tickets with its own funds. Fifty to 100 of the tickets allotted to the band are given to relatives and friends of band members, he said.

The BYU Athletics Office, which is allotted 350 tickets for BYU athletes, "here on scholarship, but are in sports other than football," pays for its athletes' tickets, Passey said.

According to Andrus, a large percentage of the BYU athletic tickets are also given to relatives or friends of BYU athletes.

Another ticket bloc of 340 is allotted to ASBYU clubs. These tickets are funded by club dues, Andrus said.

Bush said fewer than 300 tickets are specifically allotted to ASBYU student government. Of these 300 tickets, fewer than 60 are paid for with ASBYU general funds.

Most of them, Andrus said, are paid for by those individuals to whom they are allotted.

Ticket control

In another related matter, Andrus said his office has direct jurisdiction over the number of tickets allotted to the Cougar Band, the Cougarettes, BYU athletes, halftime performers, ASBYU clubs and ushers.

A motion was considered at the July 22 ASBYU Executive Council meeting that would remove almost all athletic-event tickets from the jurisdiction of the Athletics Office.

"Our office puts out the bucks," Andrus said of the proposal. "We budget for them (the tickets), so the Athletics Office is going to fight to keep jurisdiction over those tickets."

Major league baseball

Players ratify contract

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An overwhelming majority of major league baseball players voted Wednesday to ratify the contract agreement that ended the unprecedented midseason strike.

Now it's the owners' turn, and they'll meet in Chicago today to discuss approval of the agreement as well as a format for the remainder of the season.

Ten of the 15 teams which have reported votes on the agreement gave it their unanimous approval. The Detroit Tigers, who voted unanimously in favor of the contract following a workout Wednesday, were the 14th club to approve it by a lopsided margin.

The Pittsburgh Pirates declined to reveal the margin of their vote, but the other 13 clubs voted in favor by an overwhelming 342-12 spread. A simple majority of the 650 players on active major league rosters, plus those on injured reserve, is needed for ratification of the contract.

Besides Detroit, the contract has been unanimously approved by the players on the Milwaukee, Kansas City, Baltimore, Toronto, Montreal, Houston, St. Louis, Atlanta and Chicago Cubs. The New York Mets voted in favor by a 24-1 margin, Seattle 23-3, San Francisco 23-2 and Minnesota 21-6.

The player voting ends today when the owners hold their meeting — postponed from Tuesday because of the air traffic controllers' strike — to discuss ratification.

The owners will also decide on a format for the remainder of the season. Options include picking up the standings as they were when the strike began June 12 or adopting a split-season plan and adding an extra tier of intra-divisional playoffs.

Indications are that a majority of owners in both leagues favored the split-season concept. But while a simple majority is enough for it to be adopted in the American League, a three-quarters vote is needed in the National League.

Meanwhile, the players continued to work out in preparation for the resumption of the regular season — whatever the format — on Monday, following Sunday night's All-Star Game in Cleveland.

Some critics claim that the organ lacks expression in terms of the subtle shading of volumes, color and attack. At first, this may appear to be true. Indeed, in many traditionally produced instruments of common pedestrian design, the criticism can be accepted. However, as in most art-forms, art lies in the successful overcoming of the apparent limitations of the medium. Music of past and present composers for the organ lacks for little in artistic expression and subtle nuances especially with the playing of the music under the hands of master player.

It doesn't take a master piano player to make music with a Baldwin FunMachine. Baldwin believes in musical fun for every-one. Discover for yourself how Baldwin has made music easy-to-play, fun-to-play. Make music with just one finger of each hand-one for the soloist and one for accompaniment. It's versatile, real, fast and easy to play. It's easy to play even if you've never played a musical instrument before. Come in. Play it to believe in! WAKEFIELD'S INC., 78 North University Avenue, 373-1263. Mon.-Sat. 10-4.

MUSIC TIP:

The subtle addition or subtraction of a step to a balanced chord, and their arrangement in easy access from to or more manuals, are the real means of musical expression in the organ.

Former BYU student Ray Crosby built this gold-washing plant on campus. According to Crosby, his machine is worth an estimated $85,000.

Former Y student develops portable gold-washing plant

By KAREN HAIL
Staff Writer

A 10,500-pound gold-washing plant has been under construction for the last four months on campus in the research machine and development shop.

Former BYU student Ray Crosby of Provo said he built the machine because he didn't like what he saw in similar machines on the market. Crosby said he started out mining as a hobby nine years ago. Now he is the owner of Sawtooth Mining and Resources Inc. of Stanley, Idaho. He started developing the idea of the machine two years before he started building it for his company.

"Similar machines on the market can go for as much as $250,000," Crosby said. "My machine has been estimated as being worth about $85,000, and I built it for about $20,000."

The machine, which is 35 feet long and 12 feet 4 inches high, has an advantage over other machines because it puts the nuggets through three washes instead of the usual single wash, Crosby said.

The machine is also the only totally portable one of its size and takes just five minutes to set up. It is taken directly to the mining location at a river or stream bed by being pulled on its three axles behind a truck or tractor.

Crosby said the machine has the capacity to wash 120 tons of gravel per hour.

"There hasn't been much development in placer mining until the past two years," Crosby said. Placer mining is the washing of valuable metal that has been deposited through water in rivers or streams, he explained.

"Usually gold comes from volcanic deposits. Clay is associated with these deposits and is hard to wash out," Crosby said. "Because this machine has three washes, the nuggets are better separated from the clay."

Unlike other machines, Crosby's will catch nuggets up to 3 inches in diameter.

Soil is dumped through the "grizzly" on top of the machine which washes and sizes the rocks to 5.5 inches.

The rocks then go to a vibrating screen where they are sized to 2.5 inches, said Crosby. The third and final wash takes place in the "trommel." Most gold is one-half inch or smaller and drops through the holes in the trommel to "sluice boxes" which are cleaned out daily, Crosby said.

Because Utah doesn't have many gold deposits, Crosby said he does the majority of his mining in central Idaho.

"I usually go up there for the summer, from June 15 to Oct. 15. After then, the sluice boxes begin to freeze up and we could get snowed in," he said.

Orem City Library

Free movies offered

By TRACIE SMITH
Staff Writer

Private screenings of movies are no longer limited to the few who own video cassette recorders, thanks to an Orem City Library program.

The library's screening equipment and large selection of movies are available to the public free of charge. Movie viewings are scheduled each Monday morning for the coming week. Library media director Dave Koralewski begins taking calls at 10 a.m. Monday, and said it usually is filled by 11 a.m.

According to Koralewski, scheduling a viewing is a matter of luck and perseverance. "More people want this service than can possibly get into the schedule."

The library has two facilities for screening the films. Groups of 15 or less view the movies on a 25-inch television in a private room. A large screen projection system accommodates parties of 16 to 200, he said. The screen system was donated to the library by the Orem Chapter of Rotary Club International.

The library management said scheduled viewings are private events, so they do not give out information regarding titles and times of movies to be shown. This policy also avoids any competition with local movie theaters.

The library schedules one daily feature film in the large projection area for public viewing. The public movie is usually shown at 4 p.m. A schedule of the public movies may be picked up at the library or obtained by calling the library media center, he said.

The films chosen for the public viewing are usually cultural, educational or classic films, Koralewski said. The library is not trying to attract a crowd with these films, but wants to show movies which are rewarding to the viewer, he said.

According to Koralewski, a series of documentaries on the history of motion pictures is currently being shown at 4 and 5 p.m. daily.

Koralewski said there are rules governing the use of the screening facilities. Someone 18 years of age or older must be in the viewing room at all times to supervise, and food and beverages are prohibited from any area of the library.

Luau planned for students

A Hawaiian luau sponsored by the ASBYU Social Office is planned for Aug. 15 from 8 to 10:30 p.m. at the pavilion in the Kiwanis Park, according to an ASBYU Social Office representative.

John Savio, ASBYU Social Office spokesman, said the evening will include a full-course Polynesian dinner of roasted pig, with all the trimmings of a real Hawaiian luau.

Following the dinner a special program of Polynesian entertainment, including a fire dance, will be presented, Savio said.

"Once a month, the ASBYU Social Office puts on a special evening of dinner and entertainment, referred to as 'A Touch of Class' where students can enjoy themselves without having to dress up in tuxes and gowns," Savio said.

A limited amount of tickets will go on sale Tuesday in 327 ELWC. The cost will be $10 per couple.

Guidelines set for aerophobics

By TERRY NANI
Staff Writer

Striking air controllers and concern for airline safety, coupled with a fear of flying, may heighten the anxiety some students have of flying to and from school in the new weeks.

According to Carol Cott Gross, co-director of the organization "Fly Without Fear," aerophobic nonfliers fear the unknown.

"At age 25, I disliked flying. I started keeping 'in case of death' notes before traveling by plane, praying for good weather, and sitting up and vigilant throughout even the shortest flights," Mrs. Gross said.

In collaboration with Dr. Ronald Melmed, a psychiatrist from Greenview, Conn., Mrs. Gross established "Fly Without Fear" in the New York City vicinity.

Melmed said participants begin with gatherings at New York City airports to meet with airline personnel, visit control towers, experience flight simulation and finally take a short hop to a nearby city followed by a long-distance "graduation" flight.

The "Fly Without Fear" staff designed the following guidelines for those worried about air travel.

1. De-mystify flying. Read about it. Visit the airport in advance. Talk to airline personnel or attend a phobia clinic.

2. Develop a relaxation exercise and practice it daily. Yoga breathing is recommended; or learn to evoke a vivid mental image of a soothing landscape or situation.

3. Avoid disaster movies and accounts of air accidents.

4. Pack and prepare in advance. You can't fool fear by staying out all night or rushing to the airport at the last minute. Arrive on time. Don't buy flight insurance.

5. Identify yourself to flight attendants as being fearful. Ask the airline customer service agent to meet you at the check-in counter. Know the kind of aircraft in which you'll be flying and anticipate where you'll be sitting. But be flexible, as changes can occur unexpectedly.

6. A vacuum of inactivity will fill with fear. Schedule in-flight activities. Bring games or books.

7. Stay in the present. Don't imagine "What if...?" The fastest seat belt sign does not mean the plane is in trouble. Turbulence is not fatal. Don't lapse into a rigid silence.

8. Don't clock watch. When you do land, fight the feeling of relief and release. It only makes the flight seem worse than it was.

9. Compliment yourself on your accomplishment. If possible, fly again soon.

'Creeper' offers escape

By BRENT DUNCAN
Staff Writer

For those who want to escape from the present and spend a few hours going back in time to the 1800s, the Heber Creeper is just a few miles up Provo Canyon.

The Heber Creeper is an old steam engine train that creeps its way out the back door of Provo Canyon and into Heber Valley.

The first rail line to Heber Valley was started by a son of Brigham Young. It was taken over and completed by the Rio Grande Railroad Company in 1890. For almost 80 years the Heber Creeper delivered produce, freight and passengers to Heber Valley.

Highway and other transportation improvements caused the Heber Creeper to be put to sleep in 1968. In 1971, local businessmen and railroad enthusiasts took on the task of resurrecting the Creeper. Since then, the train has become well known to locals and tourists as one of the most enjoyable attractions in the Utah Valley area.

Beginning at the foot of Bridal Veil Falls, the old steam engine train "creeeps" up Provo Canyon and into Heber Valley. The Creeper then winds deep into the Utah Alps of Wasatch Mountain State Park and along the west bank of Deer Creek Reservoir.

The Creeper stops in Old Heber City, a rebuilt Wild West pioneer village. The village is a new attraction this year and the highlight of the Heber Creeper ride.

Replicas of turn-of-the-century railroad artifacts are on display in the buildings along with other memorabilia from the Wild West

The Heber Creeper creeps up Provo Canyon toward Old Heber City. The Heber Creeper was completed in 1890, put to sleep in 1968 and reinstated in 1971.

era. People can wet their whistles with a shot of sarsaparilla in Rosie's Saloon while bands of outlaws treat each other to shots of lead in the streets.

Unfortunately, the stay in Old Heber City is too short (less than 45 minutes) to enjoy all its attractions. The train is not the only accessible route to Old Heber City. The drive would be worth it to spend time in the old pioneer village taking advantage of its other attractions: good food in the saloon, rides on an authentic stagecoach and an occasional live band performing on the town's sidewalks.

After the train refuels, it's all aboard for the 18 and one-half mile trip back into the Utah Alps, stopping once again at Bridal Veil Falls. The round trip takes about 3 and one-half hours.

Workshops teach performance skills

By PAM NIELSEN
Staff Writer

Junior high school, high school and college students with an interest in the vocal arts have been able to develop their musical performance skills at BYU during two workshops of offered July and August.

The Singing Entertainer Workshop, held last week, was focused specifically for budding entertainers, said Randy Boothe, director of BYU's Young Ambassadors performing group and the workshop director.

Classes in popular vocal techniques, showmanship, makeup artistry, choreography, stage presence and audition preparation were provided.

This is the workshop's second year, Boothe said. "We have made a giant step forward," he said. "Last year we only had 43 students attend, and this year we had 80."

Each student was able to participate in a private recording session with prerecorded orchestral tracks, Boothe said.

One of the highlights of the week was the dance instruction they received from BYU dance instructor Dee Winterton, Boothe said. "They learned quite a few show dance steps and kept begging for more."

Students attended professional workshops regarding entertainment careers and the students spent time at the Osmond Studios learning about touring and television experience.

This week the Choral Music Clinic will be held under the direction of Ronald J. Staheli, director of choral organizations and conductor of the BYU Oratorio Choir.

The workshop will emphasize the demands of ensemble performing and will be a follow-up experience for participants of the Singing Entertainer Workshop.

Students will participate in an intensive week of training and activities covering all facets of the choral music spectrum including large ensemble, vocal jazz ensemble and madrigal and group voice training, Staheli said.

"Approximately 70 students are attending this first Choral Music Clinic," he said.

Latin festival to be held

A Latin festival, "Viva La Fiesta," will be sponsored by The Guadalupe Center in Salt Lake City Sept. 19 and 20.

In an effort to expose the people of Utah to the beauty and dignity of the Latin culture, "Viva La Fiesta," will provide Latin cuisine, art, music and other performing artists.

The Utah Arts Council, directed by Ruth Draper said visual artists who work in the Latin tradition of either fine art or folk art, who would like to sponsor a booth for displaying and selling artwork, should contact Dan Burke at 533-5757 by Monday for further information.

The council also said any performing artists such as vocalists, instrumentalists, dancers or those having talent of any other nature who work in the Latin tradition and who would like to participate in the Latin festival should contact Gerald McDonough at 535-5198 by Monday.

Pardoe Theater season spans field of dramatic repertoire

By PAM NIELSEN
Staff Writer

Everything from Shakespeare to Neil Simon will be included in the eight drama productions to be performed during the 1981-82 Pardoe Theater Season.

In addition to season tickets for the Pardoe productions, theater goers may also select season tickets for productions in the department's more experimental Margetts Arena Theater, according to Colleen Bird, theater ticket office manager.

The Pardoe season will open Sept. 17 with Neil Simon's "Sunshine Boys," directed by Tad Danielewski and starring BYU faculty members Charles Metten and Charles Whitman. The play expresses Simon's feelings about the problems of change and obsolescence in the incredibly fast pace of American life. "Wings," opening Oct. 22, is a contemporary drama by Arthur Kopit and will be directed by Ivan Crosland. The play takes the audience into the strange, terrifying, shattered world of a woman who has suffered a stroke and her attempt to make sense of the new world around her.

On Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 26, "Tom Brown's Schooldays" will make its debut. The Victorian classic, adapted and directed by Bruce Herford with original music by Chris Andrews and lyrics by Joann and Jack Matland, champions the defense of the weak against the strong and is set against the backdrop of the traditional English school system.

The musical comedy "Pippin," written by Roger O. Hirson with music and lyrics by Stephen Schwartz, will be presented Jan. 21 in the de Jong Concert Hall. It entails a kaleidoscopic journey of a young man trying to find the ideal situation in life.

Shakespeare's "King Lear," a monumental tale of ingratitude and revenge, will find its way to the Par-doe Theater's stage on Feb. 11. Directed by Max Golightly, the drama will feature a special guest artist in the title role.

"Fires of the Mind," written by Mormon author Robert Elliott and directed by Robert Nelson, will open March 18. The play, according to the author, "is a human drama reflecting the imperfect thoughts and actions of several good men, each struggling in his own way to become better."

The first summer production of the season will be Moliere's "Tartuffe," directed by Charles Metten. It will open May 27. The comedy, a new translation/adaptation by John A. Green of BYU's French and Italian department, explains how religious hypocrisy can destroy a family.

The season's final production will be Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "You Can't Take It With You," written by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart and directed by Jean Jenkins. The lovable American screwballs in the play may behave oddly in the comedy, but the audience is to decide who is in touch with reality.

According to Robert Nelson, a member of the theater season committee, the yearly play selection is the result of three months of evaluating suggestions both from within the department and from theater patrons throughout the campus and community.

"The matter of balance is our biggest concern," he said.

Productions of a more specialized appeal will be presented in the Margetts Arena Theater. "In the Margetts, we try to give a little more attention to standard and contemporary works that aren't quite as widely popular," Nelson said. "We also reserve that theater for new works by LDS authors and new translations or adaptations."

Barta Heiner, a former BYU faculty member, will open the Margetts season on Sept. 15 with her one-woman show, William Luce's "The Belle of Amherst." The play is based on the life and writings of Emily Dickinson.

New works by Mormon authors will also be featured. "Homecoming on the Wasatch Range" by Jack Weyland, author of the popular novels "Charly" and "Sam," will open Nov. 19.

On April 1, "Hall of the Mountain King," an adaptation of Howard H. Snyder's book by BYU graduate Susan Lewis, will be featured.

Contact the Theater Ticket Office at 378-3875 for further information about season tickets and other drama events.

Joe and Eunice Naranjo, with their son, Thomas, work together in their garden. The American Indian Services is helping married Indian students learn gardening basics.

Marrieds learn gardening

Because of the rising cost of grocery bills, American Indian Services (AIS) has developed a gardening program to teach married Indian students the basics of farming and home production.

"Several married Indian students are anxious to lighten their food bills and gain experience in farming," said Dale Tingey, director of AIS. "The AIS is able to assist them in this way by providing equipment, seed, water and fertilizer."

Tingey said the property used in the program was arranged by Clyde Davis, AIS board member. "One piece of land is a site in Provo where a church will be built in the future," he said.

Joe Naranjo, a sophomore majoring in justice administration from Santa Clara Pueblo, N.M., and his wife, Eunice, are involved in the gardening program.

"This experience will help us in the future,"

Naranjo said. "We've learned about irrigation systems, water drainage and fertilization."

Mrs. Naranjo said she had no more experience in farming than pulling weeds and now, with the help of AIS, she is growing corn, tomatoes and beans.

The program teaches the couples home production and storage as well as gardening. "After the vegetables are picked, we will learn to can and store them so that we can use them during the winter," Mrs. Naranjo said.

Tingey said the AIS is trying to create friendly competition among the participants in the program. "The couples that produce the best crop will receive a prize and cash gift at the end of the season."

"Gardening makes a nice family project," Tingey said. "The program is also helping Indian people follow the counsel of the prophet."

Free the eagle' Ruff group lobbies

By KYLE STEPHENS
Staff Writer

Among several of Howard Ruff's Utah Valley-based organizations is a national lobbying group, the Eagle. Although the group's name might give the impression it lobbies for wildlife uses, this is not the case.

Ruff, a nationally known financial advisor and one of the best-selling book, "Survive and Thrive in the Inflationary Eighties," recently wed his family to the Provo area and brought all of his business organizations with him.

According to FTE program director Lloyd Newell, the group was established by Ruff to promote free enterprise economic legislation.

The "eagle" referred to in the group's title is an American eagle, Newell said.

Ruff said. "The objects of FTE are: (1) to oppose legislation that accelerates our national decline; (2) to press for legislation that can stabilize the country so the ship of state will not sink; it is through the inflationary eighties; (3) to be sure senators and congressmen we need to elect know we are around between elections."

Attorney Neal Blair is president of FTE and is its day-to-day operations.

Newell said that as Blair's assistant, he manages the FTE office from its Orem headquarters and works as FTE director.

Newell credits Blair as the political mastermind behind FTE's success.

FTE is rapidly becoming a major force among national lobbying groups," Newell said. Newell described FTE as a citizens' lobbying organization that was established in Utah Valley after Ruff saw the area as "an ideal place to do it all together."

Howard Ruff believes you can't have a good economy unless you have a good government," Newell said. "He's a sincere man who has strong feelings about his country."

For this reason, Newell said, Ruff organized FTE more than one year ago, announcing the formation of the group in the March 1980 edition of "The Ruff Times," his financial advisory newsletter which has more than 170,000 subscribers.

"FTE attempts to represent the collective concerns of thousands of Americans," Newell said. "The 'let' has been overly represented for years by such people as Ralph Nader. Ruff wants to try and balance out that representation."

Ruff said at the time he organized FTE he knew his decision to become involved in politics would be controversial and would lose him several subscribers, according to Newell.

"I will represent FTE in testimony before committees in both houses of Congress when we feel a piece of legislation is dangerous or important, accompanied by the same press exposure Nader gets when he shows up," Ruff said.

Newell said although Ruff is controversial, he is respected in Washington and has testified at several Congressional hearings. Recently Ruff met with Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman, Newell said.

Newell said Ruff, through his FTE lobbying group, can promote the free enterprise system and work against government regulation.

"As a lobbying group, we work in concert with senators, congressmen and other lobbying organizations," Newell said.

FTE also publishes a monthly newsletter which Newell edits called "Howard J. Ruff's State of the Nation." The newsletter is made available for one year to those individuals who make any contribution to FTE, Newell said.

FTE, Newell pointed out, is a non-profit organization which is strictly regulated by the federal government.

Newell said FTE, "is fully behind Reagan's tax and budget proposals." The June 6 issue of "State of the Nation" features a front-page article telling how the group had been invited to the White House with other lobbying groups and was formally thanked by Reagan for its lobbying activities.

According to Newell, the group's work concerns economic matters.

Media room offers information

Students can learn more about the assertiveness and decision making demonstrations on the Hemlock maneuver, CPR, and biofeedback; and movies including "Daphner in the Snow," "Uncle Ben," and "John Baker's Last Race."

The media room gives students the opportunity to see movies and slide presentations and have their questions answered by "professionals," she said.

The small group atmosphere provides for more informal interaction making.

She said the media room will be open daily from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in 151 SWKT. "There is no charge and all interested students are invited."

"The Student Life Media Room will continue in the fall," she said. "We would also like to cover a larger variety of topics from the Health Center, University Standards, American Indian Education and the International Student Office."

Mrs. Martin said the media room will let students know there is help available for different problem areas. "Sometimes they have certain problems and don't know where to go for help," she said.

Band clinic assists music techniques

Eighty junior and senior high school band students and 50 choral students are on campus this week to participate in a band clinic, according to Lori Stephenson, who is responsible for music workshops for the department of conferences and workshops.

Drum major George Parks, director of bands at Massachusetts University and drum major for the Reading, Pa., Buccaneers, a professional drum and bugle corps, is an asset to BYU's band clinic, said Daniel Bachelard, associate professor of music and co-director of the clinic.

"He has been used as one of the models in the McCormick drum major films which are sent to all high schools and drum and bugle corps," Bachelard said.

"We are very, very fortunate to have him coming. You would have to go clear back to Massachusetts to get a chance like this again," Bachelard said.

He said the participants take part in technique classes for their own instruments and go to a variety of mini-classes including a flag class, composition, history and development of band literature, chamber music and drum major ensembles.

Bachelard said this is the first time he has had the opportunity to work with Parks.

Participants practice from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. At the end of the day, a full-band rehearsal is held to go over what has been learned in preparation for a concert to be held Saturday in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC, he said.

According to Bachelard, the students will have a talent show tonight at 7 in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC.

Saturday's concerts include the junior high jazz band students performing at 9 a.m., the junior high concert band performing at 9:45 a.m., the high school jazz band performing at 10:25 a.m. and the high school concert band performing at 11:10 a.m.

"This is a terrific opportunity for band members. They are able to go home and be that much more of an asset to their own programs," Bachelard said.

Y selected as location for political training program

The Republican Party has asked BYU to participate in a national political training program, according to Christian Sonne, president of BYU College Republicans.

He said the purpose of the national program is to recruit new members for the College Republican clubs and train them to assist in the upcoming 1982 congressional elections.

The program means BYU will have highly trained people to offer Republican office seekers in the 1982 campaigns, he said.

A set of car keys, a pair of contacts, or a paper down in an hour may be sitting in the lost and found department waiting for the owner to identify and claim them.

Waness Niel, supervisor of the lost and found department, located in the ELWC, said the department handles 3,000 to 5,000 items per month. Articles turned into lost and found are kept for two months, then eventually sold as unclaimed objects, Mrs. Niel said.

"When you lose something you should come directly to the lost and found department and report the lost article," she said. "Leave a detailed description of the item and make sure that your address is correct and complete."

Mrs. Niel said often items are turned in but students do not leave a complete address and the items cannot be returned. Students leaving the local area should also consider writing to the lost and found, she said.

"Persons finding an article should turn it in promptly to the lost and found department," Mrs.
Niel said. "If the department is closed, there is a drop box nearby."

According to Mrs. Niel, university policy regarding items found involves delivery to the lost and found department by: (1) taking them to the custodial office of the building where found so they can be picked up by a daily pick-up service;
(2) by sending them through campus mail; (3) by bringing them in personally to the lost and found in 108 ELWC.

Mrs. Niel said one thing students can do to save the university money is to "clean out their lockers since it requires a lot of time and processing for articles taken from lockers to finally reach the lost and found."

High school students Y to sponsor workshop

A workshop providing practical experience in newspaper and yearbook publication, photography and advertising for high school students will be held on campus Monday through Friday.

The 25th Annual Publications
Workshop, sponsored by the department of conferences and workshops, will feature five professionals, said
Ralph V. Larson, college coordinator for the department.

According to Larson, the section on newspaper production will be headed by Bill Porter, assistant executive news editor for The Utah Star.

Porter will teach students the newspaper business from interviewing to writing and editing," he said.

Bob Rollins and Hal Williams will handle the yearbook section, Larson said. "Their section will review layout, equipment, covers and color."

Larson said the advertising section will be headed by Jerry Jerome, assistant professor of advertising at BYU.

Jerome will discuss investigating the elements of a good ad, making a good advertisement, establishing a budget and meeting expenses, Larson said.

Street maintenance by both city, Y crews leads to confusion

Anyone who has spent much time driving around this campus will acknowledge that there are some definite traffic problems. An area which seems to present an excessive amount of difficulty for drivers are the roads near the Marriott Center and Heleman Halls. A more direct system of traffic management in this area could solve many of the problems.

BYU has done much to try and improve this intersection in recent years and one BYU Security Police officer said he felt it is a fairly "clean" intersection as far as violations and accidents go.

While few accidents may actually occur, some drivers have said they feel there are too many near misses, and the intersection is still difficult for motorists to unravel. Lt. Mike Haroun, manager of BYU Security Police's Traffic Division, said he thinks some confusion at this intersection could be avoided by painting more yield signs across some of the traffic lanes. According to Haroun, however, BYU is limited in the action it can take because most of the intersection is owned by Provo City.

Another area of confusion for drivers is where the exit from the Richards Building parking lot intersects 1230 North. Persons exiting the Richards Building are often unsure of where they need to be to turn into the proper lane. Some people exit from the left side some from the right and some go up the middle and give their shocks a workout on the drain that is there.

An action that would give BYU a greater chance to solve these problems is currently under consideration by Provo City. According to Jack Zirbes, Provo City's traffic engineering supervisor, a proposal has been made to deed over to BYU 1230 North from Canyon Road around the loop extending past the Wilkinson Center. Zirbes said the Provo City Commission will vote on the matter soon. We encourage the commission to give this section of road the university so more effective traffic management procedures can be developed.

This is the only road completely surrounded by BYU property which is not owned by the university. While it is not our intent to criticize Provo City for the manner in which it manages traffic on this road, when improvements are needed they could be implemented quicker if the university did not have to seek city approval.

One other area which presents some traffic problems is the "Y" intersection on the southwest corner of the Marriott Center. Cars heading west down University Parkway have a hard time seeing the traffic light from the right-hand lane. Tom Birch, a Provo City Traffic Engineer, said he would investigate the situation and see that a "signal ahead" sign was erected if the problem did constitute a hazard.

Provo City is encouraged to act quickly on these proposals so that driving on BYU campus can become less confusing (and hazardous) for students and visitors.

Horses defended

Editor: After reading the editorial comment concerning the killing of wild horses not adopted and the use of horse meat as an alternative to beef, I feel it is my duty to speak in behalf of Mr. Ed and Trigger and all those who love them. I won't waste much time upon Jay Evensen's reasoning all you want to call it that. After all, any intelligent person can see that the mindless slaughter of the west's buffalo a hundred years ago cannot justify the unnecessary killing of horses today.

I shall speak instead of his statement that horse meat "in today's inflation-fighting world is an acceptable alternative to beef."

As a horse lover, it would be easy to plunge into my argument by expounding this unique animal's many endearing qualities and its aesthetic value. But since some apparently are not capable of appreciating such beauty, I will cite instead a few facts that anyone, horse lover or not, can comprehend.

Horse meat is, in general, not an economical alternative to cow's meat. One point is that the horse is characteristically a sleek animal with much less muscle mass than the cow. This, of course, means less meat yield per animal. Also, the reproduction capacity of the horse is as great as the cow's. Further, it takes a horse four to five years to reach its ideal weight, compared to the cow's one year, and a horse must consume more feed per pound than a cow to obtain this weight. Taking these points into consideration, it is easy to understand why little if any profit can be made on horses raised for meat. So, it is apparent that if the horse were more commonly used for meat, it would not benefit man and thus would be a shameful waste of one of the world's most lovely animals.

Now perhaps there are those who, even after this very practical approach, still agree with Evensen. For these people I must resort to the scriptural approach of this argument by quoting the greatest horse lover of all from Leviticus, "... These shall ye not eat... because he divideth not the hoof..."

And thus we see that aesthetically, economically, and even scrip-

Air traffic strike exemplifies poor labor negotiation methods

Many people blame the air controllers' union for this week's strike. But after close evaluation, it appears the government must also take a hefty share of the blame.

The strike has been an example of labor negotiations at their worst and the strike could have been avoided by a number of labor negotiation methods in use today.

The easiest way to avoid strikes is to keep employees happy and productive. Taking good care of employees, according to leading political scientists, includes more than just good pay and fringe benefits.

Researchers have found workers also need a chance to "be their own boss" through promotion opportunities, arranging their own hours when possible, and workers need a chance to give valuable input into their agency's policies.

The Federal Aviation Agency did not heed these research findings. One controller on national television said he didn't care if he lost his job because he didn't want to work "for a government that lies and treats us like throw-aways."

It appears the FAA did not want to listen to the controllers' explanation of the tension that accompanies their jobs — where one mistake can cause hundreds of deaths — and how they wanted to give input to improve air traffic control systems. They only heard about the extra money controllers wanted.

The controllers, however, sealed their own fate by flippantly giving the government only three days to accept their terms — ridiculously higher than the tentative agreement unapproved by union members — or they would call an illegal strike.

Once the strike was called, the government was obliged to enforce the law and punish the strikers, or lose control over other professions also prohibited to strike, like postal workers.

There are alternatives to strikes. Binding arbitration is one method used to settle negotiations at impasse. The two sides agree to accept any decision of a mediator chosen by them who examines union demands and management resources available and determines how disputed issues will be settled.

Non-binding arbitration is similar, but the two sides do not necessarily have to accept the decision of the mediator.

Another method of settling labor disputes at impasse is to have both sides write what they consider to be a fair settlement and seal it in an envelope. A mediator would examine the two proposals and determine which is the most fair, which would then become binding on both parties.

Obviously, it is cheaper and easier to take care of employees and try to keep them happy and productive. If negotiations become necessary, both sides should be willing to compromise a little and listen to others. If an impasse occurs, there are ways to avoid strikes, which can be costly and even dangerous, as the strike this week has been.

Appearance of evil avoided

It looks like a regular liquor store. The wine may smell like wine, even taste a bit like wine, but there is one major difference. Every bottle in the store is non-alcoholic.

Here we have it: a Mormon liquor store, but that's not all. Don't forget the new cola. It looks and tastes like cola, but the Catch is, it's decaffeinated. Included are four coffee manufacturers that are also among the decaffeinated ranks and suddenly the red light changes to green. Move ahead. Sin a little and do it legally. The sin has been decaffeinated or de-alcoholized, so no repentance is necessary.

It's great. I have my wine, cola and coffee. Cheers! Now all I have to do is wait for the tar and nicotine to be taken out of cigarettes.

with our values. If we can remember that fact we will be much slower to condemn people for their political attitudes. My experience at BYU has relentlessly taught me that we, as a people, need to foster more tolerance for viewpoints different than our own.

FLUSH founded

Editor:

I have a suggestion — I think we should create a new office on campus and appoint Ron Kingsley to it right away. Apparently Kingsley has little to do but write silly editorials on the personal hygiene of his fellow students. If he is worried about disgusting we could appoint him chairman of the Foundation to Limit Unacceptable Student Habits (FLUSH).

I feel this would be a worthwhile endeavor although I also believe there are more important subjects to discuss in the paper, like whether or not students can be used as f3 pencil on computer graded.

Britain's money ills traced to monarchy

The entire Western World seems to be revelling in the storybook marriage of Prince Charles of Britain and Lady Diana Spencer.

It should be disgusted. Britain, once thought to be the nation of civilization, is suffering its deepest social and economic crises in decades.

Not only does the country face its worst unemployment rate in history, greater than that of the Great Depression of the 1930s, there are other problems as well. Britain's inner cities are the battleground of some of the most vicious looting and rioting the country has ever known as rival gangs of unemployed youths take out their frustrations.

Although most feel the reasons for the rioting are economic, signals of a rising fascism led by the National Front are also ominously appearing.

Finally, Britain's youths are dropping out of school at a higher rate than ever before.

The global community has temporarily forgotten about these problems to focus on a spectacle of aristocracy — the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer.

There is a direct relationship between the ills Britain is facing and the monarchy.

The monarchy costs Britain $25 million annually to maintain. If this cost weren't enough, the monarchy also bleeds the government through royally owned lands which are substantial in nature. These lands are free from taxation and the profits which would normally go to the government go instead to a few members of an extensive royal family.

The cost and pomp and splendor of the royal family is perhaps best exemplified by the overindulgences of the Royal Wedding where excess ran rampant.

The wedding itself cost $8.5 million to produce. The Royal Navy sent a crew of 246 seamen to guide the couple safely and comfortably along a honeymoon voyage.

Britain has too many economic ills to afford the added expense of a Royal Family chosen by "divine right."

No longer will the government be able to answer the young, unemployed, poverty-ridden blacks in Brixton and Liverpool which ask why the disparity exists.

—Ric Jensen

Marriage methodology manifested

"If you had more faith, you'd have gotten married within six months after your mission," said Ken Bush, popping a handful of green M & M's.

"But Ken," I quipped, desperate for any excuse that might seem viable, "all the temples in this area have been booked for months. Besides, you know I don't want to rush into anything, especially since I've only been home since December."

"... of 1977," he blurted, finishing my sentence for me. I hated to admit it, but even with my admission of rationalization, his words had the vague echo of truth. Most of my old missionary companions will soon be grandparents, and here I am, single as a church.

I've often wondered what the secret was to all these quick engagements and fast marriages. And after much personal consternation, I decided to only hope for deliverance from BYU bachelorhood was to emulate the example set by some of our more faithful RM's: a formula of task considering the fact that only have three more weeks of zookie life, but hardly an impossible task.

Actually, getting engaged in one week and married in three isn't that difficult at BYU if one employs a precise methodology.

The following modulus operandi currently in vogue:

1. The "Have'n't we met before" opener. This line works about 8 percent of the time. If she says, "I think so," then you're on your way. If she says, "Get lost," then move on. It's kind of like trading, but more successful.
2. The "Is it you?" (Somewhere in Time) question. It works about 2 percent of the time. If you say, "Are you the one?" Which ever you choose, remember to say it such a way as to elicit a positive response.
3. The "I know you're the one" proclamation. This is similar to number 2, but rate it a four quarters. It's best not to use this line on more than two coeds per week.
4. The "Two-date engagement" tactic. This is not as best as number 3. The worst she can say is "No, so don't be afraid to pop that question. No need to waste any more time or money on her that necessary."
5. The "Returned Missionary Syndrome." Speak of nothing but your mission, how many baptisms you had and how you can't wait to go on another one with your wife. Carry your scriptures with you every date and ask her to call you every date. If she doesn't, it's most effective on coeds from Utah and Idaho.
6. The tactful "Hello, I'm a returned missionary and am looking for a choice daughter of Zion to fulfill my priestly obligation. Who are you interested in?" This is best said in one breath, without the use of cue cards. Try your best to make her feel like a returned missionary.

The most important thing to keep in mind is not to procrastinate. For those of us who fail to reap the harvest before our sojourn expires there is one consolation: our wives that we get a tuition refund.

Pass the M & M's Ken.

—Michael Morris

New code just another Postal Service blunder

The Postal Service recently announced its latest multi-billion dollar job called "ZIP+4". The new expanded zip code system is supposedly designed to streamline mail delivery, and save money.

However, that's the same excuse the Postal Service has used for introducing other costly programs that have flopped. The public can no longer afford the Postal Service's "money-saving programs."

Unfortunately, each of these failures costs the taxpayers untold billions every year. A little review of the Postal Service's history will certainly jolt the mind.

Curb boxes were eliminated in urban areas despite much public outcry. The reason was to save the public's money. The money the Post Office saves is now spent on gas to get to the nearest post office, which usually isn't very near.

A little later, high speed equipment was installed for streamlining the mail delivery and reducing the number of people needed in the mailroom. However, an independent study showed that the equipment operates so fast, that the operators cannot read the zip code, and mail is consistently routed incorrectly. I must be re-done by hand. To add insult to injury, initially the machines tore up the letters as they passed through it.

After these two "moneysaving" plans were put into use, the private stamp soared from 8 cents to 13 cents. Then, like a helium balloon on a hot day, the cost continued to soar to 15 cents, to the now short-lived 18 cents. Now, according to the Associated Press, first-class stamp prices are expected to be raised to cents soon.

Despite the obvious contradictions between the moneysaving programs and the cost to the post patron (a polite term for sucker) the Post Office continues to dream up new outlandish schemes for saving money.

In Washington Star story that emerged last several years ago, it was discovered the bulk package processing center in Maryland had come up with a failproof plan to save the taxpayers' money. Employees had been throwing out garbage truck full of packages in order to keep up with the amount of mail needed to be processed. Officials must admit, the plan did indeed save on delivery costs.

This latest "moneysaving" scheme involves adding four more digits to the zip code. The advertisement put out by the Postal Service on ZIP+4 reads, [we will] "pass the reduced costs on to you in the form of smaller postage creases."

What they are saying is that if they have saved your money for you they are going to take it from you more postage increases.

The Postal Service is pushing blindly ahead once again to saddle the taxpayer/postal patron with another ridiculous scheme. It seems that ZIP+4 is another Post Service attempt to put one over the taxpayer. The new system will not save any money at all, but it probably will up postage twice the amount it would have cost to let things alone.
